Confirm initial trial eligibility with a study specialist

One of our study specialists will reach out to you to make sure that you fully understand and feel comfortable with the trial. They will ask you general health questions as necessary to determine if you may be eligible, and will do their best to address any questions or concerns you may have. If eligible, you will then be referred to a clinical trial site.

Meet with physician and clinical team at clinical trial site

The physician and clinical team will offer you a free consultation, explain the clinical trial in detail, and answer any questions you may have. They will then schedule your treatment along with any follow-up visits that may be required.

Treatment phase

The treatment is an outpatient procedure done under local anesthesia. During the treatment, thin wires called “sources” will be inserted into the lesion. The lesion will be bandaged and the sources will be left in place for approximately two weeks, following which you will be asked to return to the clinic to remove the sources. During this two-week period, you can continue with your daily routine as usual. After the treatment, the clinical team will continue to monitor your progress and you will attend some follow-up visits for further clinical evaluation by your physician.
